

STEVENS

The Stevens family were mine owners in Devonshire, England. It is not known what kind of mines¹ they owned but their sales of ore took them to London, England, and later to America as early as 1760. Eventually, some of them settled in America², in the Vermont area. They were mostly United Empire Loyalists and after the American Revolution (1775-1783) they moved to Canada some settling in the Wakefield Hill, Brompton, Richmond County, Quebec, and Waterloo, Shefford County, Quebec

¹ Tin, iron, copper as well as some other metals are mined in the Devonshire area of England

² America in the sense that it is used did not mean the United States as the whole of North America was referred to as – America – at that time.
